

Must

- As an employee, I want to add and remove tasks so that I have a good representation of my current workload.
- As a librarian, I want to be able to schedule events so that I can plan activities more effectively.
- As a contractor, I want to see the dates important to different tasks and events so I don't fall behind or miss something time-sensitive.

Should

- As a parent, I want to edit existing tasks and events so that my kids' changing plans can be accommodated.
- As a manager, I want a calendar that shows when events and tasks take place so I can know when to schedule my employees.
- As a developer, I want to update the status of tasks and events so that I know how much progress I have made at a glance.

Could

- As an event planner, I want to see the size of different tasks so that I know what to prioritize.
- As a procrastinator, I want to immediately know if any of my uncompleted tasks or events are behind schedule, so that I can make them up quickly.
- As an assistant, I want to receive a reminder of different tasks and events before they happen so that I don't forget my boss's schedule.

Won't

- As someone who thrives on encouragement, I want a congratulatory message to appear when I complete a task so that I'm more motivated to be productive.
 - Fun idea, but very low on the priority list.
- As a student, I want to create groups with my peers where we can share tasks and events so that organizing collaborations is easier.
 - Out of scope; DoDate is intended for single-person use.
